CASAA E-Cigarette FAQ - Find out more at www.CASAA.org

What is an electronic cigarette? A device that uses a small battery and a heater, called an atomizer, to vaporize a nicotine solution for inhalation.

Are electronic cigarettes for quitting smoking? Electronic cigarettes are intended as an alternative to smoking tobacco cigarettes. They are not designed to treat nicotine addiction, only provide nicotine in a safer manner. However, many experts agree that switching to electronic cigarettes is almost as good as quitting smoking. Additionally, some people have reportedly used the reduced nicotine levels available to wean themselves off of nicotine altogether and now use 0mg nicotine liquid.

Is E-Liquid safe? While nothing is 100% safe and further testing needs to be done regarding long-term use, based on the fact that they contain only ingredients already shown to be safe for human consumption and research studies show that they do not contain most of the toxins or levels of carcinogens that are found in tobacco cigarettes, we are reasonably certain they are considerably safer than tobacco cigarette smoking. The American Association of Public Health Physicians (AAPHP) supports the use of electronic cigarettes as a reduced harm tobacco product. The AAPHP released a statement that electronic cigarettes "could save the lives of 4 million of the 8 million current adult American smokers who will otherwise die of a tobacco-related illness over the next 20 years."

Doesn't nicotine cause cancer? Nicotine is an addictive stimulant, similar to caffeine and is not shown to cause cancer. Although nicotine use carries other possible health risks, without the tobacco smoke, it is relatively low risk.

Didn't the FDA say electronic cigarettes are dangerous and banned them? The FDA tested 18 samples and found that a few had trace amounts of possible cancer-causing nitrosamines, which were found only at parts-per-billion. The FDA allows certain levels of nitrosamines in products. Independent testing showed that the levels of nitrosamines were nearly identical to those found in FDA-approved nicotine patches. They also found that one cartridge was contaminated with "about 1% diethylene glycol," however subsequent tests have found no other contaminated cartridges to date. Because consumers have reported that switching to e-cigarettes have allowed them to refrain from smoking, the FDA asserts [had asserted] that electronic cigarettes are a nicotine cessation treatment and therefore drugs. While the FDA has been confiscating e-cigarette shipments, they have not been legally banned. A federal judge recently [2010] ruled that the FDA is overstepping its authority and agreed with the AAPHP that they are a reduced-harm tobacco product. The D.C. Federal Appeals Court subsequently upheld that ruling. The AAPHP has also petitioned the FDA to retract their misleading statements about electronic cigarettes and allow them to be marketed as reduced harm tobacco products.

There is no diethylene glycol in any of our e-liquid products

Can I use electronic cigarettes anywhere I want? That depends on the laws of your [city &] state [& country] and the establishment. Some business may not allow you to use the devices in their establishment, as is their right. Some states are trying to not only include electronic cigarettes in indoor smoking bans, but ban them altogether. CASAA is fighting these proposed bans.

Find out more at www.CASAA.org CASAA is a non-profit organization of concerned volunteers.

We Support CASAA

Our mission is to ensure the availability of effective, affordable and reduced harm alternatives to smoking by increasing public awareness and education; to encourage the testing and development of products to achieve acceptable safety standards and reasonable regulation; and to promote the benefits of reduced harm alternatives.

Highlights - Dr. Joel Nitzkin testified February 5 2014 before the Oregon Legislature

Tobacco harm reduction and e-cigarettes

Tobacco harm reduction is an educational initiative by which smokers who are unable or unwilling to quit are advised that they can lower their risk of a potentially fatal tobacco-attributable illness by 98% or better by switching to any one of the smokeless products now on the American market. These data are based on long-term epidemiological studies of Snus use in Sweden and on use of "smokeless tobacco" in the USA since the mid 1980's. Since e-cigarettes are basically a nicotine-only product with only the smallest traces of the carcinogens and other toxins found in smokeless tobacco product, e-cigarettes likely carry even less risk.

"Harm reduction" does not mean "harmless."

All of these products, including the pharmaceutical nicotine products pose more of a potential health risk than usually accepted in other consumer products. None are risk free. It is only in comparison to cigarettes that they can be considered very low risk. Nicotine addicts, but it is the other toxins in cigarette smoke, when inhaled deep into the lung, that kill. All of the 480,000 estimated tobacco-attributable deaths each year in the USA are due to a single tobacco product – the cigarette. Deaths from all other tobacco products are so low in number and so hard to distinguish from background that they are not tracked by our federal agencies. Simply changing the mantra from a "tobacco free society" to a "smoke-free society" would align tobacco control policy with the science and evidence base.

Harm reduction could save millions of lives.

Right now, the best we have to offer current smokers is a set of pharmaceutical-based smoking cessation protocols that we know will fail about 90 percent of smokers who use them, under the best of study conditions, with results measured at six to twelve months. The flaws in the current "evidence-based" policies are fairly obvious. They do not satisfy the urge to smoke in the majority of smokers, the dose is too low, the duration of treatment too short and there is no built-in provision for self-reinforcement when the urge to smoke returns.

A modestly successful tobacco harm reduction initiative, if added to current tobacco control programming, would satisfy the urge to smoke in a majority of smokers, and would likely save the lives of 1.5 to 4.8 million current adult American smokers, with the numbers depended on the rate of switching to lower-risk, smoke-free products. In Year 20 of such an intervention, again, depending on switch rates, the annual numbers of smokers and deaths would likely be down 30 percent to 80 percent from current levels.

ECBLEND E-Liquids are Usable in Any Personal Vaporizer that is Refillable

Options, Steeping & Other Tips

Why Steep? ECBlend creates your custom e-liquid at the time you order it. With our custom creation and fast shipping, you may receive your product 'too fast'. Flavors blend and marry fully over time, so you will have a richer, deeper, more flavorful product after a few days or weeks of steeping. This is especially true of tobacco flavors and larger bottle sizes. This is also generally true for all e-liquid.

At ECBlend we make each bottle custom to your order - you will receive the product within a few days of creation. Let them sit for a few days or a week before vaping and you will find yourself with some very flavorful e-liquid.

STEEPING: Although most ECBlend E-Liquid tastes great right out of the bottle, some juices get even better when 'aged' or 'steeped'. This is especially true of complex blends, tobacco products, our Dragon series, and larger bottle sizes. E-Liquids taste a lot better after properly aged. Time allows all flavors to be married together and mature, making them taste richer. Tobacco Flavors generally taste better over time.

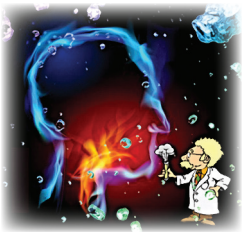
For best steeping results: Store e-liquid in a cool dark place (in a safe place AWAY FROM CHILDREN AND PETS) and shake daily. (Steeping can be from 2 days up to 3 weeks. It is a personal preference) - PG is a better flavor carrier than VG and requires less steeping. The higher the VG content, the better it will taste with steeping.

IN A HURRY FOR YOUR E-LIQUID? Try This!

Seal the bottle tightly and air free in a zip lock bag, then seal it in another (tightly sealed and air free also. If they are not sealed completely the ink on the label might bleed, making it unreadable.) Place the bottle in hot tap water for 10-15 minutes. This will allow for better mixing when shaking. This process can be repeated as much as needed to completely blend your e-liquid. Email Comment from a customer who recently tried this method: "OMG!! I just did your (...) method and I am in love!! Thank you!!"

BASE MIX: Throat Hit, Vapor, and Consistency

depending on the Base Mix you select: The more Propylene Glycol (PG) in the Base Mix will make the liquid thinner, and will produce more throat hit and less vapor. The more Vegetable Glycerin (VG) in the Base Mix will make the liquid thicker, throat hit will be less and the vapor produced will be much greater.



Reduced PG : Flavoring is PG based, if nicotine is selected it is added as VG based, and the remainder is filled with VG

100% PG : there is no VG in the bottle. This will produce little to NO vapor, and LOTS of throat hit

100 %VG : there is no PG in the bottle. This will produce little to NO throat hit, and LOTS of vapor

80%PG / 20%VG : This will produce a small vapor cloud , and LOTS of throat hit

70%PG / 30%VG : This will produce a small to moderate vapor cloud , and above-moderate throat hit

60%PG / 40%VG: This will produce a moderate vapor cloud , and moderate throat hit

BEST > 50%PG / 50%VG: This will produce a moderate vapor cloud , and moderate throat hit

40%PG / 60%VG : This will produce a moderate vapor cloud , and moderate throat hit

Throat hit also depends on how many milligrams of nicotine you select and what kind of Vaporizer you are using it with (higher voltage, lower resistances etc).

Throat hit can also be changed on your device. Using a lower resistant atomizer/cartomizer will also increase the throat hit. A variable voltage device will also allow you to vape at higher temperatures by increasing the voltage. BE SAFE: Do not modify your device and check with your manufacturer for more information.

ADDING MENTHOL ALSO INCREASES THROAT HIT

COLOR

Anything with nicotine in it may change to a light amberish color. Some of the flavorings will also cause a color change over time as the flavor develops and intensifies (also known as steeping). (Example: Our RY4 starts off as clear when it is first mixed. Over time, it turns into a deep-reddish amber as it ages.) Some flavors have a natural color and some (very few) include natural or artificial color in the flavoring extract. This is a very small component added. ABOUT COLOR and ATOMIZERS or CARTOMIZERS: There is no scientific information study that we know of, however, many people feel that DARKER COLORS or ARTIFICIAL COLORS can lower the life expectancy of an atomizer/cartomizer.

DO NOT OVERFILL: This results in leaking. You may also need to CLEAN your device.

BURNT or PEPPERY Taste: Keep your wick and coil wet. Dry wicks and coils can give a burnt or peppery taste and lower the lifetime of your device. A peppery taste is also a sign that the juice needs to steep longer, or you are getting a small amount of E-Liquid in your mouth from your vaporizer.
PERFUMEY TASTE: Some flavors have a strong scent to them, this is usually eliminated with steeping. If the perfumey taste is still present after steeping, the e-liquid may need some extra steeping to 'breathe.' Remove the cap and dripper tip, store the E-Liquid in a cool dark place (Away from children and pets) for a couple of days.

What's in it?

ECBlend Flavorings are water-soluble and natural wherever possible. Some flavors are artificially flavored, just like food flavorings. We do not use Diethylene Glycol in any of our e-liquid products. We use only USP Food Grade Kosher Propylene Glycol (PG) and Vegetable Glycerin (VG). There are no animal by-products in either our PG or VG.

E-Liquid is available containing Nicotine in differing concentrations to suit user preference. 36mg recommended for dilution only. Depending on the options selected, ECBlend E-Liquids may also contain: Ethyl Maltol, Cool Hit®, Menthol, sour)

SAFETY of Bases

VG and PG are common food additives used in a variety of formulations. PG has been utilized in asthma inhalers since the 1950's, and is the compound of choice for delivering atomized medications. The FDA includes PG on its Generally Recognized as Safe (GRAS) list

Food-grade palm-based vegetable glycerin is 99.7% pure, with the remaining 0.3% being water. It has a sweet taste, but is metabolized differently than sugar and does not contribute to bacterial tooth decay. Vegetable glycerin is also used as a substitute for alcohol, Because it is derived entirely from vegetable oil and pure, it is hypoallergenic and safe for food purposes.
